

PSY60020 : Human Development B

This course offers an advanced study of the lifespan psychology perspective, with special attention to life transition interventions and developmental autobiography. There is a focus on later phases of life and death, as well as transpersonal aspects of human development. The student will examine psychological content, context, skills, and applications as they apply to the lifespan perspective.

Credits 2