

PSY6042 : Cognitive and Affective Bases of Behavior B

This course continues the survey of the theories and empirical research evidence of cognitive and affective psychology. The student will explore how these topics apply to their ongoing research and personal development interests. The course will examine how theoretical bridges can be built between these cognitive and affective processes and spiritual questions found in the practice of clinical psychology.

Credits 3