

PSY2900 : Introduction to Group Therapy

This course focuses on human communication in group settings, with special attention to dimensions relevant to spiritually-oriented clinical psychology. The student will both study and experience various forms and uses of groups. The course provides opportunities to participate in and lead a variety of group formats, as well as a context within which to contribute to group theory.

Credits 2