

Master of Arts in Transpersonal Psychology (MATP)

Degree Type

Master of Arts

Online + Low-residency

The Master of Arts in Transpersonal Psychology (MATP) degree program offers an opportunity for students to study the theories and practices of transpersonal psychology. The program prepares students to apply this knowledge to a range of professional and community settings. Students pursue a Concentration of their choice in Veteran Leadership, Leadership and Transformative Life Coaching, Creativity and Innovation, or Spiritual Psychology. Aside from Veteran Leadership, where students must choose to pursue at admission, the other concentrations can be elected by the beginning of the second year. A dual Concentration combines any two of the three offered options with additional units and time for completion. Some electives offered may be applied toward an optional sub-concentration in either Dream Studies or Transpersonal Ecopsychology.

The program is designed for transformative learning, integration of transpersonal and wisdom principles, and development and application of skills for personal and professional contribution<sup>1</sup>. According to O'Sullivan, transformative learning fosters enhanced awareness and consciousness in people, communities, and frames of reference. It encourages the vision of alternative approaches to living and posits the possibility of social justice, peace, and joy. Students are guided in their cultivation of leadership skills, self-knowing, and professional consciousness.

The MATP is an online program. Some online courses may require participation in synchronous teleconference sessions. The program includes a residency requirement, MTP7201A Opening Seminar or MTP7201B Transitional Seminar. The synchronous seminar offered in the Spring will be online. The synchronous seminar offered in the Fall will be in person. There is an optional concentration offered that includes a residency requirement.

Note about Additional Fees: In addition to tuition, seminar attendance for the MATP program requires students to budget for travel, room, and board. See below for additional expenses related to the selection of a Concentration in Transformative Life Coaching, Concentration in Veteran Leadership, or a dual Concentration.

Curriculum as Journey

The MATP curriculum is designed as a journey that includes scholarship, experiential learning, integration, increased consciousness, transformation, spiritual practices, creative expression, embodiment, and application of transpersonal education in service to greater communities. Faculty members facilitate whole-person instruction in a dynamic format within a close learning community. There is a high level of group discussion, participatory learning, and shared experiences. Instructors guide students in setting goals that enable them to make contributions to their families, communities, and professional fields.

Practicum experiences take place in the student's home community and are chosen to prepare the student for future professional work or provide new tools for current professional work in their area of Concentration.

Faculty serve as academic advisors who guide students through their educational journey, helping them select courses that attain their academic and professional goals, and complete the program in a timely manner. Academic advisors are an essential part of students' experience and play a central role in assisting them in finding meaning and relevance in their transpersonal education.

The MATP program can be completed in two years on a full-time basis. It can also be completed on a part-time basis.

Program Learning Outcomes

Upon successful completion of the Master of Arts in Transpersonal Psychology program, students will be able to:

- Reflect upon the meaning of whole-person development, including growth in mind, body, spirit, creativity, and community, and apply that understanding to their own personal and professional lives.
- Blend theories and practices of transpersonal psychology with those in a professional concentration area(s).
- Employ multiple ways of accessing information, expressing self, and working with others in a professional Concentration area.
- Articulate shifts and developments in their own thought processes, including the assumptions they bring to situations, as these relate to their program of study.
- Use reflective scholarship and transpersonal theories and practices to create an action plan that addresses the needs of a community, organization, or professional area.

Degree Requirements

To receive a Master of Arts in Transpersonal Psychology degree, students must successfully complete a minimum of 42 units. The composition of those units varies depending on the Concentration selected. The following are specific degree requirements:

- 17 units in Core Courses – Foundational Year
- 16–22 units in Concentration Courses
- 3–9 units in Elective Courses

Core Courses—Foundational Year (17 units)

The Foundational Year provides students with theories, practices, and embodiment of transpersonal and spiritual psychology.

Item #	Title	Credits
MTP7201A	Opening Seminar	1.0
MTP7401	Embodied Spirituality	3.0
MTP7403	Introduction to Transpersonal Studies	3.0
MTP7202	APA Writing Style	1.0
MTP8300	Creative Expression and Transformation	3.0
MTP7603	Theories of Personality: Cross-cultural Perspectives	3.0
MTP7801	Spiritual Development Across the Lifespan	3.0

Concentration Courses (16–22 units)

MATP students select at least one professional Concentration to focus their second year of study. As part of the Concentration, students complete the course MTP9041 Transpersonal Integration Paper, which enables students to demonstrate how transpersonal education can be integrated into community service. The following are the four primary Concentrations:

- Creativity and Innovation
- Spiritual Psychology
- Leadership and Transformative Life Coaching
- Veteran Leadership

In addition to formal coursework in the Concentration, students are expected to embed concepts and skills of their chosen Concentration into the Transpersonal Integration Paper. If a Dual Concentration is chosen, both areas of inquiry must be embedded within the Transpersonal Integration Paper.

Please review the policy on Certificates, Concentrations and Sub-concentrations here.

Creativity and Innovation (16 units)

Creativity and Innovation (16 units): The Concentration in Creativity and Innovation helps students work and use creative thinking skills in order to solve problems and make decisions within communities. It focuses on creative expression and imagination to move communities and organizations forward. The knowledge and leadership skills developed in this Concentration are applicable to work in institutional settings, corporations, hospitals, schools, and with individuals. It is key for entrepreneurial ventures. This Concentration addresses the educational goals of those who see themselves as “Cultural Creatives” and who want to develop new and original ways of impacting social change.

This Concentration provides the educational background necessary to apply for the Registered Expressive Arts Consultant/Educator \(REACE\) credential through the International Expressive Arts Therapy Association (IEATA). Students will be required by IEATA to complete additional experiences and supervision upon graduation for credentialing. Students are encouraged to review the credentialing requirements established by IEATA as these may change over time. Sofia University does not guarantee credentialing of any particular student who completes the MATP program with a Concentration in Creativity and Innovation.

Students are awarded a Certificate in Creative Expression upon successful completion of the Concentration in Creativity and Innovation. Their practicum experience (MTP8873 Professional Practicum I, MTP9974 Professional Practicum II), and project for MTP9041 Transpersonal Integration Paper must involve an aspect of creative expression to be eligible for the Certificate.

Leadership and Transformative Life Coaching (22 units)

The Concentration in Leadership and Transformative Life Coaching is based on the theoretical principles and practices of ontological coaching. Ontological coaching facilitates the emergence of personal and professional life by exploring how humans co-create reality and perception. It addresses both action and the transpersonal levels of awareness. The Concentration aims to prepare students for a career as a coach or another professional in a field that integrates and makes use of coaching practices such as spirituality, executive leadership, creativity, psychedelic integration, wellness, and more. The Concentration prepares students to enter a professional coaching relationship with clients and to establish a specialized coaching practice.

Sofia University is a Level One Accredited Program by the International Coaching Federation (ICF). Students graduating from The Concentration in Leadership and Transformative Life Coaching will have educational background necessary and fulfill several of the requirements in order to apply for an Associate Certified Coach (ACC) credential through ICF. This comprehensive 1 year concentration includes 99 contact learning hours in synchronous and asynchronous format, observed live sessions, 7 group and 3 1:1 mentoring hours, recorded final coaching evaluation and a minimum of 30 coaching hours.

Veteran Leadership Concentration (16 Units)

A transpersonal concentration focused on cultivating post-traumatic growth, moral injury repair, and purpose-driven leadership among veterans and allied service professionals

The Veteran Leadership concentration is designed to apply the insight, strength, and sense of purpose forged through service toward creating meaningful impact in both veteran and civilian communities. It serves those who have carried responsibility and agency amid conflict, including leaders, decision-makers, and witnesses who navigated the moral and human consequences of service, often within systems they could not fully control. This includes individuals from military, peacekeeping, humanitarian, or first responder capacities whose actions, or the constraints placed upon them, directly affected lives. Through a transpersonal framework, participants are invited to transform lived experience into wisdom by examining the psychological, spiritual, and cultural dimensions of trauma, moral injury, and reintegration, with attention to the ways identity intersects with race, gender, sexual orientation, spirituality, socioeconomic background, and cultural context. They learn to integrate their lived experience with relational and facilitative ways of being that foster healing and transformation across diverse communities. Graduates are prepared to lead from a place of embodied wisdom, guiding individuals and communities toward connection, resilience, and purpose. Examples include peer facilitation, community-based leadership, nonprofit development, veteran support programming, and roles within healing or integrative service organizations.

Six of the courses in this concentration include a 3-day in-person immersion component, designed to support experiential learning, peer connection, and embodied leadership practice. The Psychedelic-Informed Therapy class includes a one-day in-person immersion on the Saturday following Fall Seminar.

* Not available until Spring 2026.

Dual Concentration

Several combinations of Concentrations are available to students; the units and timeframe required to complete a Dual Concentration vary based on the selection made. Dual Concentrations require additional coursework resulting in additional tuition and fees. Students considering a Dual Concentration should discuss this option with a Financial Aid Office and must declare their intention to pursue this option by the beginning of the second year or when enrollment in Concentration courses first takes place.

Creativity and Innovation and Leadership and Transformative Life Coaching (43 units)

Students who successfully complete the Concentration in Creativity and Innovation (16 units), four elective courses (12 units), and the core competencies in the Concentration in Leadership and Transformative Life Coaching (15 units) can obtain a Dual Concentration in both areas. An additional nine months of study is generally required. (Note: with the required Core Courses this dual concentration requires a total of 60 units to graduate.)

Students are awarded both a Certificate in Creative Expression and in Transformative Life Coaching upon successful completion of the dual Concentration in Creativity and Innovation and Leadership and Transformative Coaching. Their practicum experience (MTP8873 Professional Practicum I, MTP9974 Professional Practicum II) and project for MTP9041 Transpersonal Integration Paper must involve an aspect of both concentrations.

Optional Sub-concentrations

Please review the policy on Certificates, Concentrations and Sub-concentrations here.

Dream Studies

Sofia University's Dream Studies area of study is offered in our Institute of Transpersonal Psychology. It is one of the few programs of its kind in an accredited University in the United States. The program has an interdisciplinary orientation, exploring dreams from transpersonal, integral, psychological, scientific, mythological, spiritual, religious, and cross-cultural perspectives. Courses cover subjects that include sleep, dreams, and states of consciousness; ordinary, extraordinary, and anomalous dreams; dreams as they relate to health and creativity; a practicum in dream sharing with individuals and groups; personal mythology and dreamwork; and a final integration group presentation.

With five courses to complete, this 13-credit curriculum is taught by Sofia Faculty. This area of study is designed for students, researchers, counselors, therapists, and anyone with a desire to explore dreams in a way that is applicable to personal development and/or careers in higher education, research, counseling, coaching, writing, and other careers where healing, creativity, imagination, inspiration, and transformation are important.

The Dream Studies path can be completed independently as a certificate, or as a sub-concentration or concentration in our Transpersonal Psychology Master's or Doctoral Programs.

Transpersonal Ecopsychology

Sofia University's area of study in Transpersonal Ecopsychology is offered in our School of Transpersonal Psychology. It is one of the few Transpersonal Ecopsychology programs in an accredited University in the U.S. The program has an interdisciplinary orientation, exploring ecopsychology from the perspective of spirituality, transpersonal psychology, sustainability, culture, sacred ecology, and practical application. Courses cover subjects that include eco-spirituality; ecopsychology; sustainability, culture, and sacred ecology; nature-based programs and wholeness, a practicum, and a final integration group presentation.

With five courses to complete, this 13-credit curriculum is taught by Sofia Faculty. This area of study is designed for students, researchers, counselors, therapists, and anyone with a desire to explore the relationship between human beings and Nature in a way that is applicable to personal development and/or careers in higher education, research, counseling, coaching, writing, and other careers in which protecting Nature and healing the human-Nature bond for the benefit of both is important.

The Transpersonal Ecopsychology area of study can be earned independently as a certificate or integrated as a sub-concentration or concentration in our Transpersonal Psychology Master's or Doctoral Programs. The following courses fulfill the requirements for the Transpersonal Ecopsychology area of study.
